Practical Ideas and Strategies

In this highly engaging seminar, award-winning media specialist and international presenter, Deborah B. Ford, will highlight the best, NEWLY published children's books, including picture books, chapter books, novels, graphic novels, folklore, poetry, nonfiction titles, and more! Deborah reads and evaluates each new children's book, then develops fresh, innovative ideas to use them in all areas of your curriculum. As a bonus, she also finds the best, new web tools and apps to pair with the books she shares. Many of the ideas, apps and online resources are applicable to other books as well. This way, you can pick and choose the new books and activities that are best suited to your students and the priorities of your classroom or library. Throughout this fast-paced day, Deborah will model her passion for books as well as demonstrate successful skills for booktalking and reading aloud. You'll also learn ways to use technology to extend your interactions with students about books in ways they love to learn. Join her for a compelling day filled with engaging, ready-to-use ideas, highly appealing booklists, her comprehensive handbook, and unique teaching tips to introduce and fully extend learning based on the newest, most outstanding children's books. Engage yourself in an energizing celebration of the best new books and powerful ways to use them with your students!

A Message From Seminar Leader, Deborah Ford

Uniquely Qualified Instructor

Deborah B. Ford is an award-winning library media specialist and an outstanding international presenter. She currently serves as the Director of Library Outreach for the Junior Library Guild, which exposes her to the latest, best books for children. She has presented at many state and international conferences, and is the author of numerous books including, What's NEW in Children's Books and Creative, Powerful Strategies to Use Them in Your Program (2018), the comprehensive resource handbook each participant will receive at the seminar. Deborah is known for her inspirational message, budget-friendly ideas and innovative ways for making the most out of the resources you have. Join Deborah for a day filled with practical, easy-to-implement ideas that will highlight the latest, best books available in children's literature and exciting, creative ways to utilize them in your program.

Dear Colleague:

My mother tells people I write book reports for a living. It's true—I get paid to read books for kids. There are worse jobs! Every year I read hundreds of new books, whittling down to the best books that you can use in your curriculum and your readers will most enjoy. I work with publishers, authors, and illustrators to make sure I find the very best of the best. There is a wealth of new literature this year, with new authors, new illustrators and new titles that will grab your imagination and send you back to your classroom or library eager to share what you've learned with your readers!

My new seminar offers hundreds of titles for all ages, reading levels and interests. Keeping diversity in mind, I've looked for titles that your readers will be able to identify with. From wordless books to chapter books, this year's selections feature incredible debut authors and illustrators. One author wrote a wonderful book of poetry based on a famous photograph. Another rewrote her entire story after she decided the bear needed to be a mom. Some of your favorites like Kate DiCamillo and Margaret Peterson Haddix are back. In this seminar I will reveal some of the back stories of the hottest books of the year. This year's nonfiction is better than ever. Content area teachers will easily be able to incorporate them into their curricula. You'll learn about ready-to-use resources that will help you teach the books or discuss them in a book club. In many cases, the lesson plans are already written.

Technology continues to blend with literacy programs. From publishers' sophisticated book trailers for marketing purposes to actually having your readers create their own, free websites and apps make the integration easier. In our seminar we will investigate the best apps for multiple devices. We will talk about ways to better utilize ebooks and audiobooks—getting more bang for our buck. We will explore free online resources that enrich the books, while connecting them to state standards. Do you have sensitivity issues? We will look at ways to make sure you aren't buying books out of your comfort zone. The most expensive book is one that's never used.

The worst outcome of a day like this is funding. So many books ... show me the money. We will address this ever-pressing issue by looking at easy ways to find money for these books you won't want to be without. Beyond the book fair, I've got a dozen ways to raise funds without turning your hair gray.

I look forward to meeting you at this fast-paced, exciting seminar in which we will immerse ourselves in the amazing world of the best of new children's literature!

Sincerely,

Deborah B. Ford

P.S. Come ready to enjoy a fast-paced day full of outstanding new books – plus powerful tools and innovative activities to use with them.

"My new seminar offers hundreds of titles for all ages, reading levels and interests."
