'Lots of tremendous information that Mary shares in a humorous, thoughtful way.'

– KELLI HAINES, PARA-EDUCATOR

Practical Strategies

How can we combine guided reading with other small group options to include leveled and more complex texts? How can we create more powerful small group structures that are flexible enough to allow us to move seamlessly from acceleration to enrichment, depending on the specific needs of each group? How can we blend our whole class and small group experiences to raise student growth in reading and differentiate literacy instruction to target specific learning needs? These questions, and more, will be answered in this strategy-rich seminar presented by Dr. Mary Howard, nationally recognized expert on effective literacy instruction.

Mary will share practical approaches designed to maximize the effectiveness of guided reading and other small group formats that will elevate whole class instruction and accommodate targeted support to meet individual learning needs.

You will leave with a renewed sense of purpose and a treasure chest of easy-to-implement strategies, ideas and procedures to maximize the effectiveness of guided reading and other small group formats designed to intensify learning to achieve maximum benefit of these experiences. If you are committed to providing high-quality literacy opportunities for every student, every day, you won't want to miss this seminar!

A Message From Seminar Leader, Mary Howard

Uniquely Qualified Instructor

DR. MARY HOWARD is an outstanding presenter with more than 45 extensive years of experience teaching reading and writing, and is known throughout North America as a leading expert in literacy instruction. With experience as an elementary teacher, reading specialist, reading consultant, and Reading Recovery teacher, Mary understands the realities of helping children learn to read and write. Mary is the author of Maximize the Power of GUIDED READING to Help All Students Attain Dramatic Achievement Gains (Grades 1-5), the extensive resource handbook each participant will receive at the seminar. Additional authorships include Good to Great Teaching: Focusing on the Literacy Work that Matters (Heinemann, 2012); Moving Forward with RTI: Reading and Writing Activities for Every Instructional Setting and Tier (August 2010, Heinemann) and RTI From All Sides: What Every Teacher Needs to Know (Heinemann, 2009). Mary's seminars are practical, fast-paced, inspiring, and filled with up-to-date strategies and techniques you can use immediately to help ALL students in your school become better readers.

Dear Colleague:

Guided reading and other effective small group formats are rich components of a high-quality reading program. The experiences they offer clearly support our efforts to achieve maximum instructional gain as we address the unique learning needs of each child. It is my goal in this seminar to demonstrate simple adaptations that will make guided reading and varied small group formats function at the highest possible level so that you can differentiate for the widely varied learning needs represented in the classrooms of today.

Are you uncertain about the role of small group instruction designed to maximize student success? Do you want to know what high-quality small group instruction should look like, feel like and sound like? Are you seeking a sense of direction that will more closely align your small group activities with the demands of more rigorous instruction and differentiation, but you're not certain how to do this or where to begin? I have designed this dynamic day to address each of these questions, and more, with practical tips and a wealth of strategies and practices to broaden the role of your small group experiences using a strong framework of instructional opportunities. I will share simple yet powerful ways to implement a seamless system of support using varied resources within an instructional design that includes whole class, small group and one-to-one experiences.

We can and should make our reading instruction, both within and beyond small groups, more robust as we keep the individual learning needs of students in mind. I will help you explore the most effective path for small group experiences designed to ensure success. You will understand how to combine whole class and small group activities and learn the secrets for designing highly effective small groups with lesson structures that are the best expenditure of classroom time. I will help you establish high expectations for your small group instruction while maintaining your focus on the recipients of those expectations – our students.

I look forward to spending the day exploring how to maximize the instructional potential of your small group by dramatically increasing the effectiveness of those groups. You will learn to create a more flexible instructional framework designed to meet the varied learning needs of your students in small settings. New understandings about guided reading have afforded us an opportunity to elevate how we look at literacy in the future if we are willing to heed the call. How fortunate we are to have this learning opportunity!

I look forward to meeting you at the seminar!

I will help you explore the most effective path for small group experiences designed to ensure success.'
