Practical Ideas and Strategies

In this seminar, JULIE COMPTON, outstanding restorative practices educator and presenter, will share numerous preventive measures that are designed to build skills and attitudes in students while producing healthy and productive relationships among students and staff. You will learn a system of restorative practices that repair damaged relationships through reflective conversations that give students an opportunity to become aware of the harm they have caused and develop plans to make amends and move forward with a more positive attitude and behavior in the future.

You’ll leave this seminar with an extensive digital resource handbook, a wealth of ideas for utilizing a restorative discipline approach, and renewed desire to make a difference in the lives of your most challenging students.

A Message From Seminar Leader, Julie Compton

Uniquely Qualified Instructor

JULIE COMPTON is a highly experienced educator and restorative practices practitioner with proven expertise working directly with challenging students exhibiting repetitive, difficult behavior. Her extensive experience across time and grade levels gives her an incredibly unique perspective on the relationship among restorative practices. The transparency with which she approaches teachers makes her very relatable and trustworthy. Julie presents in a way that gets to the heart of the matter and addresses repetitive and disruptive behaviors in the classroom in a way that improves learning and relationships for everyone. You will walk away with many highly practical restorative practices strategies you can immediately implement in your classroom. Julie is the author of RESTORATIVE PRACTICES: Help Your Students Improve Their Behavior and Strengthen Their Learning, the extensive digital resource handbook each participant will receive at the seminar. Join Julie for this practical, common-sense approach to improving behavior that will transform your classroom and the lives of your students.

Dear Colleague:

Educators have always been a first responder of sorts. We are with our students over 180 days each year. We see them at their best and at their worst. This has always been true. That's why so many of us remember some of our teachers over our entire lifetime. They were there when we needed an adult the most. The challenges of the past several years have left our students needing more support and understanding than ever before. We are seeing a "learning loss" that is frightening. Many of our students are experiencing feelings that impede the entire learning process, leaving them feeling unsure of themselves academically and socially. Being back in the classroom full time means sharing space with students who may or may not have the interpersonal skills to handle the conflict and frustration that comes with this territory.

There is hope on the horizon! With proven restorative practices, we can significantly improve student behavior, reduce exclusionary discipline, and begin to mediate the loss so many students are dealing with. We can become the link between where our students were, where they are now, and where they need to be. This means academically, but it also means emotionally and socially. With appropriately used restorative practices, we can help our students gain greater empathy, manage conflict more productively, improve their behavior, and strengthen their ability to learn. It's a good day when you can say goodbye to challenging behaviors and say hello to a stronger culture of learning.

My goal for this interactive one-day seminar is to bring you dozens of practical strategies and ideas that will excite you about helping your students improve their behavior and strengthen their learning. You will be able to view their struggles as authentic opportunities for you to help and heal and empower your students to manage their problems more successfully. This confidence in their emotional skills will lead to greater academic confidence, and we know that confidence is a path to success. Please join me for a day full of learning that will have you looking forward to meeting your students exactly where they are. I promise to not waste a moment of your time.

Sincerely,

Julie Compton

P.S. If you could transform the life of just one student this year your time will have been well spent. Invest a day with me and together we can make a real difference in the lives of many of your students.

"With proven restorative practices, we can significantly improve student behavior, reduce exclusionary discipline, and begin to mediate the loss so many students are dealing with."
