Practical Ideas and Strategies

Everyone wants to know how to reach their students who are unmotivated, underperforming and claim to not care about school. This innovative seminar will demonstrate successful strategies you can use in your classroom or school to make positive changes in these challenging students. Many of us are frustrated with the numerous students who have "checked out," are disengaged, unmotivated, and underperforming. We know the symptoms, but don't always know the solutions. The good news is that there is hope and there are strategies to begin to stop the cycle of helplessness these students experience. Join KIM GEDDIE for this one-day seminar that will cover practical ideas, strategies and techniques to help increase your success with these challenging students. She will give you numerous ideas and strategies to help you guide students toward making positive behavior changes.

A Message From Seminar Leader, Kim Geddie

Uniquely Qualified Instructor

KIM GEDDIE is especially qualified to present this seminar. She has many years of teaching experience working with difficult, disruptive students who often display an "I don't care" attitude. The strategies Kim presents are those that she and the teachers and schools she has supported across the country have found to be most effective with "I don't care" and underperforming students. Kim is passionate about helping fellow educators work more successfully with challenging and disengaged students. Her success with these students stands as a testament to her skills in teaching the most difficult to reach students as an educator, as well as her compassion and concern for all students, especially those whom many others have given up on. She is the author of Powerful, Practical Strategies for Reaching "I Don't Care!" and Underperforming Students to Increase Their School Success (Grades 3-12), the extensive digital resource handbook you will receive at the seminar. Audiences appreciate Kim's down-to-earth style and practical approach for dealing with difficult, disengaged students. Join Kim for this thought-provoking, practical seminar. You'll leave with proven strategies you can utilize with students who come to school or class with an "I don't care" attitude.

Dear Colleague:

As educators, we are under increased pressure to develop a repertoire of behavioral intervention skills that will allow us to meet the needs of all students, including students with serious behavioral problems, even though there is very limited training on what really works. The usual methods, such as sticker charts and emphasis on students' performance to gain rewards or sending students to the principal's office, usually fall flat with "I don't care" and underperforming students.

When working with "I don't care" and unmotivated students, it is critical to keep in mind that you cannot change anyone except yourself, but you can assist others to make their own changes. The good news is, with the right help, students can learn and change their behavior. This seminar will teach you strategies to inspire students to want to change their behavior. This approach focuses on internal encouragement rather than external rewards and punishment. I will walk you through all the steps and provide dozens of examples as well as demonstrate sound techniques and activities that can enrich what you are already doing in the classroom.

This seminar is filled with concrete strategies for classroom teachers, behavior specialists and counselors. It provides detailed and helpful suggestions that support you in anticipating and addressing repeated and often overwhelming behaviors. You will learn realistic, research-based strategies that will make a difference in how you view and respond to students.

I hope you will join me in this engaging, thought-provoking seminar to explore new ways to deal effectively with your "I don't care" students.

Sincerely,

Kim Geddie

P.S. The focus of this entire seminar will be on key, practical strategies to better work with your challenging students.

"You will learn realistic, research-based strategies that will make a difference in how you view and respond to students."
