Practical Ideas and Strategies

As reading educators, we see students enter our classrooms each year with diverse literacy backgrounds and abilities. We understand the importance of meeting them where they are. However, we often face a dilemma: should we adopt reading workshop, which prioritizes cultivating a love for reading and comprehension through authentic experiences – or should we embrace the Science of Reading, which focuses on explicitly, systematically teaching foundational skills such as phonemic awareness and phonics? Rather than choosing one over the other, why not integrate the strengths of both approaches? If you're seeking practical solutions to this challenge, this day is for you! In this NEW seminar, AMY STARK will share classroom-proven strategies and resources for integrating the best of reading workshop and the Science of Reading. Learn how to effectively combine explicit mini-lessons and small reading groups with engaging activities from the reading workshop model. Seamlessly integrate the very best of both these approaches into your reading instruction. You will leave with numerous ideas you can use right away!

A Message From Seminar Leader, Amy Stark

Uniquely Qualified Instructor

AMY STARK is a National Board Certified Teacher, author and international presenter. Amy is a current elementary school teacher who brings significant firsthand know-how, having successfully integrated the Science of Reading in her own reading workshop. Amy is passionate about equipping grades K-3 teachers with highly effective strategies for integrating the BEST of both into their existing reading programs. Drawing from her many years as a classroom teacher, Amy's seminars are fast-paced, interactive and engaging, and packed with use-tomorrow strategies. She is also the author of Finding the Balance: Integrating READING WORKSHOP and the SCIENCE OF READING (Grades K-3), the extensive digital resource handbook you will receive at the seminar. Join Amy for a day full of valuable resources, ideas, and tasks to maximize student learning and engagement in reading. Leave with a wealth of motivating, engaging, and successful approaches for integrating the best of reading workshop and the Science of Reading into your existing reading program.

Dear Colleague:

Like you, I grapple daily with the challenge of incorporating the changing views of reading instruction. Whether you were trained in reading workshop or the Science of Reading, we all know that there is not ONE approach to reading that is the most effective. Each approach has its benefits. So, why not integrate the very best from both?

I've crafted this seminar to offer practical resources and solutions for seamlessly integrating both reading workshop and the Science of Reading. The best part – you can immediately incorporate all the strategies and ideas I will share into your existing reading program, and you can trust they'll yield results. Each activity, concept, and lesson I present has proven successful in my own classroom and in those of the teachers with whom I work.

In addition to receiving my comprehensive digital resource handbook you'll gain a wealth of practical ideas for maximizing your reading instruction to better meet the needs of ALL your diverse learners. We'll look at how to get started, see real-world examples from grades K-3 classrooms, and you'll acquire highly effective tools and strategies. My goal is to give you the best, most practical, and successful techniques.

Be prepared to step into your students' shoes as I demonstrate these engaging, use-tomorrow activities and approaches. I look forward to sharing a wealth of practical ideas and teaching strategies to help you integrate the best of reading workshop with the Science of Reading to greatly enhance your reading instruction.

Sincerely,

Amy T. Stark

P.S. You'll leave feeling inspired, excited, and ready to elevate your reading program with the best practices from both reading workshop and the Science of Reading.

"The best part - you can immediately incorporate all the strategies and ideas I will share into your existing reading program, and you can trust they'll yield results."
