Dear Colleague:

I'll admit it: I am, always have been, and always will be a reader. I was one who stood in line at a bookstore at midnight to buy the next book in the series. This passion for reading and books fueled my career choice as a school librarian. I spend much of my day talking about books with students and teachers and recommending which books to read and teach next.

Like you, I understand the importance of reading. We all know readers are much more successful in school and on standardized achievement tests. More importantly, readers can see themselves in the situations and in the characters of books. Books allow readers to experience both a window and a mirror into their worlds.

Publishers produce an enormous and often overwhelming number of books each year. I know how challenging it can be to keep up with all those titles and that's why I'm here to help. I read extensively in all genres and will share with you the best books in those genres.

We will also discuss ways to use the best books with classrooms and students. We will combine reading with the best websites and apps you can use to engage all of your readers and learners. Building a culture of reading occurs when we are passionate about reading and can engage students with current and relevant titles. Our ultimate goal is to hook students on reading and my belief is it can happen with just the right book. I will share a diverse list of books to encourage reading and help you put just the right book in the hands of your students.

I cannot wait to spend the day with you sharing fabulous new titles already published and books you should be looking forward to. This day is about readers and doing what we love – exploring amazing books!

Sincerely,

Karen Scott

P.S. Come prepared for a fast-paced, fun-filled day surrounded by the best new books!

"I will share a diverse list of books to encourage reading and help you put just the right book in the hands of your students."
