A Message From Seminar Leader, Jennifer Rogers

Uniquely Qualified Instructor

JENNIFER ROGERS is a highly experienced educator with over 20 years of experience working with challenging students in K-12 classrooms. Drawing on her experiences as an educator and school counselor, Jen has spent countless hours in classrooms working directly with students challenged by anxiety, anger and aggression and with educators on the development of practical strategies to teach Social Emotional Learning.

She is the author of Leading for Change Through Whole School Social-Emotional Learning: Strategies to Build a Positive School Culture and author of Distance Learning: Increase Your Students' Self-Management, Relationship Skills and Responsible Decision Making, the extensive digital resource handbook you will receive at the seminar.

Jennifer's motivating seminar will give you the specific, proven strategies your most challenging students need. She can offer dozens of practical and effective strategies that have worked for her and countless educators in both special and general education settings and are ideal for distance learning.

You will leave this seminar with the tools you need to improve the learning of all of your students, especially students who need to demonstrate greater self-management, better relationship skills, and more responsible decision making.

Dear Colleague:

As an educator, I know firsthand how challenging our job has become because of the uncertainty related to teaching during this pandemic. My collaboration with educators like you who are trying to teach students who are dysregulated or apprehensive about learning in a virtual setting led to the creation of this seminar. It is a challenge for many educators to teach social and emotional competencies in an online environment. But we are all aware of the importance of building relationships with students, helping students to manage their attention, and make responsible decisions that affect their education. Students are demonstrating through their behaviors that they need new tools related to self-management and responsible decision making. As teachers, this new territory can be overwhelming for us. Knowing that we all want to provide the best supports for our students, I invite you to spend the day with me to learn new strategies that support our efforts to pivot between our in-person settings and our online ones. Join me as I share practical techniques, strategies, and tips you can immediately apply to improve the experience of all of your grades K-12 students.

Developing strong relationships, self-management, and responsible decision making skills may be easier for some students when learning in the same room as their teacher. The online environment is unique and needs us to shift our practice to meet the challenge it presents. My goal for the day is for you to leave the seminar with many new, practical tools that can help you work with students who need additional supports as they tackle learning online. This seminar is designed for you to walk away with strategies to improve student behaviors, increase positive interactions and to prevent burnout of hard-working teachers.

Please join me to strengthen your toolkit, avoid common pitfalls and leave with new resources. I am excited to help you add new strategies to help improve the behavior of your students!

Sincerely,

Jennifer Rogers

P.S. You will leave this seminar with lots of practical ideas and an extensive digital resource handbook to help you implement the strategies as soon as you return to your school!

"My goal for the day is for you to leave the seminar with many new, practical tools that can help you work with students who need additional supports as they tackle learning online."
