Practical Ideas and Strategies

Are you often frustrated by student disruptions, typically caused by misbehavior, attention seeking antics, or conflict? Have you felt discouraged due to disrespectful student behavior that only seems to get worse? Have you found that despite your best efforts some strategies seem to work but only for a very brief period? There is a solution to these negative dynamics that frustrate both teachers and students. Thousands of schools across the country have discovered that Restorative Discipline works because of its positive and enduring nature.

In this NEW seminar, you'll learn numerous practical strategies, methods, and ideas based on a Restorative Discipline approach. You'll learn proven ways to restore the real joy of teaching and facilitate greater academic success and emotional growth. You'll learn proven ways you can use restorative discipline to teach students whether in-person or online how to restore relationships, build healthier self-images and become more responsible students.

You'll leave this seminar with an extensive digital resource handbook, a more positive attitude, an abundance of ideas for utilizing a restorative discipline approach and a renewed desire to make a difference in the lives of even your most challenging students.

A Message From Your Seminar Leaders, Bruce Stewart and Doug Overton

Uniquely Qualified Instructors

Bruce Stewart is an experienced classroom teacher, school administrator, author and presenter with many years of experience working with disruptive, unmotivated, and difficult students. He attributes his success in teaching and as a principal to a philosophy of making genuine connections with all students, especially those students who need us the most. The Restorative Discipline philosophy is at the heart of his calling as an educator. Bruce is a passionate presenter and speaker who inspirationally combines relevant stories and examples, along with proven strategies and methods.

Doug Overton is an award-winning classroom teacher with experience teaching at the elementary and secondary levels in both alternative and general education settings. An exceptional presenter, he is one of restorative practices' leading practitioners, providing training on more than one hundred campuses nationwide. Doug is sought out nationally for his inspiring, yet highly practical presentations that help educators understand how restorative practices can help even the most challenging students improve their behavior and strengthen their learning.

Dear Colleague:

It is with great enthusiasm that we welcome you to the Restorative Discipline: Help Your Students Improve Their Behavior and Strengthen Their Learning seminar. Today's educators face significant challenges that require unparalleled skills, methods, and strategies to inspire and educate all students.

Traditional disciplinary practices have been proven to undermine even the best efforts of teachers and principals. Restorative discipline is effective for the very reason that traditional disciplinary practices have failed. Restorative discipline always maintains the dignity of the student. On the other hand, punishment and shaming only serve to create antagonistic relationships. These practices are demeaning and foster resentment. Restorative Discipline embodies the philosophy that students deserve to learn from their mistakes without shame.

When we provide for a student's most basic need, which is to feel a sense of belonging in the classroom, and in the school, only then can we fully engage them in a relevant curriculum. Restorative disciplinary methods include making amends for mistakes in student behavior. Students learn that by making amends – restoring trust in their classmates and teachers, they have made a positive contribution to the class. They maintain a sense of belonging and they increase their self-awareness. Our students' potential is limitless – our responsibility then is to inspire and facilitate our students to believe in themselves. Restorative discipline "gives life to every student's learning experience."

At this seminar you will learn the methods, strategies, and specific techniques that really work. Even the most disrespectful students and the most apathetic students will learn to modify their disruptive behaviors. Whether you are in-person, online or in a hybrid learning environment you'll leave with numerous ideas you can use right away.

Sincerely,

Bruce J. Stewart

Doug Overton

P.S. Your presence at this seminar defines your dedication to the art and science of teaching; but most importantly, it serves your belief that every student deserves to succeed.

"At this seminar you will learn the methods, strategies, and specific techniques that really work."
