Practical Ideas and Strategies

Teaching is not easy, and recurring disruptive behavior can take the joy right out of it. But the magic of teaching is learned with time and experience and heart. You have that! This NEW seminar will validate a lot of what you are doing and will offer you a variety of new and innovative ideas and approaches to enhance your students' success. Learn how to get that repetitive misbehavior turned around! Plan to leave this seminar with a multitude of do-able strategies that you can use immediately in your classroom. Join SHAYNA RAPHAEL for a day of learning specific teaching and learning nuances that will help you better connect to your students and significantly reduce those recurring behavior problems that can leave you feeling frustrated and drained. You will also leave the day with a menu of resources to choose from, and from that, you will be able to select those that work best for your context.

A Message From Seminar Leader, Shayna Raphael

Uniquely Qualified Instructor

Shayna Raphael is a highly experienced professional educator who has deep and on-the-ground, in-the-classroom experience working with students who often demonstrate persistent and recurring behavior at school. Shayna has worked directly with students who struggle with self-regulation, and recurring behavior problems that impede their social and academic success. Shayna is sought after to serve schools, districts, and families as an in-demand educational consultant and coach. Shayna Raphael is one of those unusual, talented, direct, approachable, and good-natured educators who regularly invests her time and expertise in supporting those who need and want what is best for their students and school community.

Dear Colleague:

The world and the realm of teaching has changed, but students' needs have not. Schools have evolved, and we are constantly evolving with the needs of our community and students. When it comes to being an effective teacher, nothing – NOTHING – comes ahead of safety and order. WE know that instruction is difficult if kids do not feel safe and wanted. Academic achievement is minimal when students do not feel welcomed and needed. There is little satisfaction or joy for teachers when students do not YET know how to be effective as students.

As a participant in this seminar, you will learn many easy-to-implement strategies and approaches to make your students' school life better. And when their world is better, yours is better. You will learn how to better de-escalate. You'll learn how to craft your lessons to include dynamic and successful interactions between you and your students, and just as importantly, you'll be able to manage the interactions between students in meaningful ways that will increase their learning. You will learn how to eliminate that momentary response of frustration or even anger. You can significantly reduce behavior problems and increase student learning.

Sincerely,

Shayna Raphael

P.S. I know how valuable your time is, so my focus for the day will be on sharing practical strategies that work in today's schools with today's students.

'As a participant in this seminar, you will learn many easy-to-implement strategies and approaches to make your students' school life better.'
