– THIA BRIDGES, 4TH GRADE TEACHER

Practical Ideas and Strategies

Students with disrespectful and disengaged behaviors are becoming more and more prevalent in our schools. These students are exceedingly difficult to reach and even more difficult to teach. They often exhibit rude behaviors, infringe on others' rights, disrupt the classroom, and refuse to engage in learning. This NEW, highly practical seminar by CINDY JONES is designed to offer educators powerful tools and techniques for changing students' negative behaviors into positive, productive learning behaviors.

You will leave this seminar with many highly effective and game-changing ideas for reducing disrespectful student behavior as well as helping students move from unmotivated, disorganized, and apathetic to engaged and successful learners in your classroom.

A Message From Seminar Leader, Cindy Jones

Uniquely Qualified Instructor

Cindy Jones has extensive experience as a teacher of special needs and general education students, crisis interventionist, principal of a school for students with behavior and emotional challenges, at-risk consultant, diagnostician, behavior specialist, author, and national trainer. Because of her extensive background, she offers dozens of practical and effective strategies that have worked for her and countless educators. Her lively, practical sessions feature cutting-edge, research-based information, fun engaging activities and effective strategies that will work for you.

Dear Colleague:

As I visit schools and travel around the country training educators, two of the concerns I frequently hear are “What do I do about rude, disrespectful students and how do I get kids to do work and engage in learning?” In schools today, we are seeing students with chronically activated stress response systems. These students are expressing anxiety, fear, and angst through negative behaviors such as rude comments, disrespectful body language, and lack of motivation. We are also seeing students who have not been given clear boundaries and have not learned appropriate social skills.

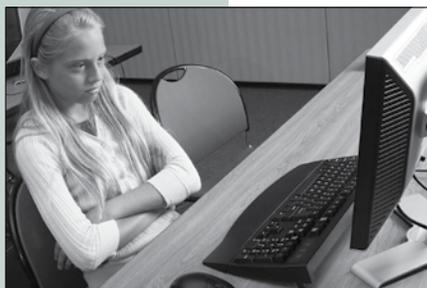

I invite you to join me for a highly practical seminar focused on strategies for disrespectful and disengaged students. At this seminar, you will discover many new ideas for reaching even your most difficult and unproductive students. The ideas presented are ones I have gained through my own experience as an educator for many years and from interacting with many highly skilled colleagues. I have seen students who were engaged in constant disrespectful behaviors and those with apathy and disinterest in academics change and grow when the correct intervention skills were applied.

My goal for the day is for you to leave the seminar with many new, practical tools that can help you with addressing student behaviors that threaten to stop our teaching, interfere with our students learning and steal your joy as an educator. Please join your colleagues and me for an exciting day filled with practical and creative strategies for changing the lives of your students and refilling your teacher toolbox with ideas that work.

Sincerely,

Cindy Jones

P.S. You will leave this seminar with dozens of practical ideas and an extensive resource handbook to help you implement the strategies in your classroom.

“At this seminar, you will discover many new ideas for reaching even your most difficult and unproductive students.”

What Your Colleagues Say About Cindy Jones

"Cindy's presentation was very informative and engaging. She offered practical strategies to use with disrespectful and disengaged students. I walked away with strategies that I am going to implement with the teachers and students that I support."

Kordney Govan, Special Education Behavior Specialist

"Such amazing and useful knowledge I gained today."

Sami Moussa, Dean of Student Affairs

"Cindy was a great facilitator. She was very engaging, funny and had great knowledge in the subject area. I learned many practical techniques and strategies that I can start in my classroom tomorrow. I will use the handbook in the years to come as a reference."

Katherine Pratt, Certified Teacher

"The seminar was very informative and Cindy Jones was a wonderful instructor. I feel better prepared to handle challenging students and those with higher emotional needs. Thank you."
