“Great information that can be used at all grade levels with many different behaviors. Thank you!”

– MARJ GROSETH, K-6 TEACHER

Practical Strategies

Do you have students who have trouble getting along with others, don't know how to appropriately interact with their peers, have a hard time starting and finishing work, don't like to change routines, have anxiety that interferes with their ability to focus, and/or can't seem to regulate their emotions? All of these behaviors may be attributed to the lack of skills needed to self-regulate. Some students come to us knowing how to recognize and control these emotions, but many do not. This research-based seminar will help you teach students who have self-regulation deficits to begin to recognize and control their emotions and actions. You will learn strategies that you can use immediately to teach your K-6 students who lack the skills required to think before they act.

Don't miss this day filled with practical strategies you can teach your students in the way they learn best and will give them tools to self-regulate their behavior!

Ten Key Benefits of Attending

- 1. Practical Strategies to Help Students Develop Self-Regulation Skills to Increase School Success
Reduce behavior problems that interfere with learning while increasing skills to support learning ... Practical strategies you can use tomorrow
- 2. Build Skills to Help Students Self-Regulate Their Thinking, Emotions and Behavior
Ideas for focusing attention, staying on task, ignoring distractions, limiting impulsivity, planning and following through, following directions, taking turns, and communicating more effectively
- 3. Reduce Anxiety that Leads to Problem Behaviors
Students lacking self-regulation skills often experience anxiety which inhibits their ability to think in an organized and clear way ... Learn ways to alleviate anxiety so students can focus their energy on learning ... Specific strategies that work
- 4. Critical Components of a Proactive Classroom
Implement effective classroom management strategies to help students develop self-regulation skills ... Ideas you can use that will make a difference
- 5. How Traditional Management Systems May Exacerbate Problem Behaviors
Find new ways to address problem behaviors and teach acceptable replacement behaviors ... Discover the difference between punitive consequences and instructional consequences
- 6. Work with Students with Special Needs
How to apply intervention strategies with your students with special needs ... Learn strategies to address individual student needs that work well within your whole class
- 7. Utilize Current Brain Research – How Young Brains Function and What You Can Do
Make the most of what we know about the brain and learning ... Practical application of brain research and how using what we know makes a significant difference in student behavior and learning
- 8. Problem-Free Transitions
Learn easy visual and auditory cues to help students make problem-free transitions ... Strategies you can use to see immediate results
- 9. Use Apps and Technology that Address Specific Behavior Needs
Discover apps for mobile devices that can be used by students to calm and reinforce learning self-regulation skills ... Ideas you won't want to miss!
- 10. Ideas, Ideas and More Ideas – Specifically for Grades K-6 Students
Multiple activities, strategies and tools that will support your students who have difficulty self-regulating their behavior at school ... Receive an extensive resource handbook designed specifically for this seminar

A Message From Seminar Leader, Kathy Morris

“ I will share dozens of ideas you can use to help all your students be more successful socially and academically, in and outside of school.”

Dear Colleague:

We don't admonish our students if they don't know how to read, write or do math. Rather, we teach, reteach, practice, and review with them. Yet, on a daily basis, students are directed to behave rather than guided through the process of what behaving, or self-regulating, means and how they can begin to act in ways that will get them what they really want in school – success, both socially and academically.

We know, through research, that each brain develops differently and that self-regulation of emotions and actions may not come naturally to all students, and in many cases, students need to be taught these skills using some of the same strategies we use to teach reading, writing and math. That is what this seminar is all about! I will share dozens of ideas you can use to help all your students be more successful socially and academically, in and outside of school. Included throughout the day will be creative ways to reduce impulsive, negative behaviors and to help students think and even plan, before acting! We will cover skills to help students become more organized, begin and finish tasks, follow directions, and communicate more effectively with peers and teachers.

By the end of our day together, you will realize these strategies will help all the students in your classroom. My goal is to give you a plethora of strategies so you can empower your students to problem solve and become more independent in using self-regulation skills.

I look forward to meeting you and sharing specific strategies that you can implement immediately to reduce problems due to students' lack of self-regulation skills and help them become independent and successful in school.

Sincerely,

Kathy Morris

P.S. You will leave with dozens of practical ideas and an extensive resource handbook to help you implement the strategies in your grades K-6 classroom!

What Your Colleagues Say About Kathy Morris

“Wish I had attended this seminar sooner! Kathy provided so many useful strategies to manage behavior in the classroom. I have much to share with my colleagues!”

– Kelly Moore-Finley, Personal Care Aide

“Thank you for the beneficial techniques to use immediately in my classroom. The examples and scenarios have given me many perspectives to consider in my instruction.”

– Alyssa Pisauo, Special Education Teacher

“Awesome! Cannot wait to pass all this information on to my peers and implement it with my students!”

– Beth Duret, 2nd Grade Teacher

“Kathy is energetic, enthusiastic and encouraging. She has real-life experience with this topic and is so willing to share and help others be understanding of all students.”

– Jani Giaquinto, 1st Grade Teacher
