Practical Ideas and Strategies

Are you wondering the best ways to harness today's free Google Tools, Apps and Extensions for teaching world languages? Are you interested in how the ACTFL World-Readiness Standards for Learning Languages can be met and ACTFL World Language 21st Century Skills fostered by integrating web-based tools and resources? Today's students are texting, enhancing photos and creating videos for entertainment. If you want to learn how to more effectively channel the tools students already access into rich web-based collaborations and products in the target language, this is a seminar you won't want to miss!

In this uniquely focused seminar specifically designed for world language educators, Lauren Rosen, an experienced world language teacher and language technology integration specialist, will help move your curriculum into the 21st Century through a focus on Google Tools, Apps, and Extensions that are commonplace in the lives of students and educators alike. Learn innovative practices for integrating mobile devices, flipped lessons, media, and more for demonstrating language proficiency.

A Message From Your Seminar Leader, Lauren Rosen

Uniquely Qualified Instructor

Lauren Rosen is an experienced world language teacher and a dynamic, engaging language technology specialist who has been sharing innovative ideas and activities to motivate and connect with language learners for more than 25 years. She has extensive classroom teaching experience including middle school, high school, technical college, and university. She strives to stay on the leading edge of integrating technology into her courses. Her passion for language learning and technology led to the development of websites and social networks specifically designed for language educators. Lauren has authored numerous articles on flipped learning, wikis, voice and video technologies to help language instructors and students reach their goals. A frequent presenter at state, regional, national, and international conferences, Lauren is known for her interactive style that provides opportunities for participants to think outside the box and walk away with practical ideas for technology integration into their own courses.

Dear Colleague:

As the world becomes flatter and the barriers disappear that once divided countries and cultures, it becomes increasingly important that our students have the skills to communicate and collaborate with people of many languages and cultures. As language educators, we are in an ideal position to prepare today's students for tomorrow's challenges. With the advent of the Internet, our classrooms became richer with access to authentic texts and materials.

Now with Google Tools, Apps and Extensions we add easy-to-access opportunities for collaboration and communication. Google not only offers us tools for research but also a medium for collaboration, connection and community built by those who are using it. My goals in this seminar are two-fold. First, to share numerous techniques and technologies to more fully engage your students in the target language and culture while communicating their knowledge to a broader audience. Second, to help you identify how the ACTFL 21st Century Skills, as defined in collaboration with Partnership for 21st Century Skills, are fostered in your language learning environment with the help of Google.

If you feel you need some fresh ideas for reaching today's students, are overwhelmed trying to keep up with emerging technologies like Google's ever-changing set of tools, or are excited by new ways to fully engage students in the target language and culture, I strongly encourage you to attend this seminar. Together, we will explore practical strategies and activities that are proven successful in motivating students to write and speak more in the target language. I look forward to sharing my excitement and enthusiasm with you about the possibilities that these new technologies offer language educators and learners.

I look forward to meeting and working with you at the seminar!

Sincerely,

Lauren Rosen

P.S. I am confident you will return to your classroom excited to begin working with some new Google inspired tools and techniques as you implement practical ideas that are sure to engage and motivate your students to achieve greater target language proficiency.

"We will explore practical strategies and activities that are proven successful in motivating students to write and speak more in the target language."
