Outstanding Strategies You Can Use Immediately

What You Will Learn ...

- Dozens of strategies to help students who have or may have dyslexia successfully read, write and spell – whether you are teaching in-person or online
- What dyslexia is and isn't
- Activities and strategies that strengthen the phonological (sound) processing system – a brain area that is often weak in children with dyslexia
- How to strengthen four major literacy areas that are typically weak in children with dyslexia
- Spelling strategies that help students with dyslexia read, as well as write and spell
- Understand how to better assess students for characteristics of dyslexia
- Classroom activities and the latest information for strengthening the brain pathways critical to reading, writing and spelling success ... Implications for our work with students with dyslexia and other reading challenges
- Instructional techniques that help all students learn, but are especially supportive for students with dyslexia and reading impairments
- How to help struggling readers move from “pretend reading” or “word calling” to a laser-sharp focus on words and the letters and patterns that form them
- Outstanding research-based teaching techniques and tools for reinforcing and strengthening your students’ reading, writing and spelling proficiency in grades K-6
- Current assessments, including screeners, that help teams notice the traits of dyslexia
- Practical and impactful strategies you can easily incorporate into your existing literacy instruction and program – you need not re-invent the wheel!
- Ways you can craft effective, practical solutions to the challenges students with dyslexia experience while reading, writing and spelling

“One of the best and most useful seminars I’ve ever been to. I learned so many strategies to bring back to my students.”

– KRISTIN GEROUX, TEACHER

Practical Ideas and Strategies

Are you searching for ways to help students who have or may have dyslexia to be more successful readers, writers and spellers? In this seminar, you will receive powerful instructional techniques, research-based strategies and many classroom activities all designed to support the success of students with dyslexia. The focus will be on best practices for strengthening the literacy skills of students with dyslexia. Gain a wealth of practical strategies for boosting reading, writing and spelling achievement, and increasing students’ confidence. Drawing on cutting-edge research and fMRI brain studies, literacy expert, MARK WEAKLAND will explore how and why dyslexia develops, and present a wealth of practical strategies, techniques and activities you can use to help activate and strengthen specific reading, spelling and language circuits in the brain. Enhance your instruction and help your students who have or may have dyslexia experience success in reading, writing and spelling.

A Message From Seminar Leader, Mark Weakland

Uniquely Qualified Instructor

MARK WEAKLAND is an outstanding educator, author and national presenter. An experienced special education teacher and reading specialist, he has worked extensively with children diagnosed with dyslexia or thought to have dyslexia. As a reading consultant and instructional coach, Mark understands the realities and challenges that teachers face as they strive to help children with reading impairments. He is passionate about helping struggling learners and students with disabilities reach high levels of learning, as well as equipping their teachers with cutting-edge, highly effective literacy practices. Mark is the author of, DYSLEXIA: Help Children Who Struggle to Successfully Read, Write and Spell, the extensive resource handbook each participant will receive at the seminar. The author of more than 75 books for children, Mark has also written five teacher resource books, including one that specifically addresses ways to prevent reading difficulties in young students: How to Prevent Reading Difficulties, PreK-3: Proactive Practices for Teaching Young Students to Read (Corwin, 2021). Mark's seminars are practical, inspiring, and filled with strategies, activities and teaching techniques you can use immediately to help students with dyslexia and ALL students become better readers, writers and spellers.

Dear Colleague:

Helping students who struggle can seem especially daunting. Fortunately, research exploring the connections between cognition, brain structure and learning clearly shows us how reading works in the brain, why some children develop reading impairments and dyslexia, and most importantly, what we can do to support and accelerate the learning of students who have dyslexia.

I have designed this dynamic day to equip you with practical tips and ideas that focus and enhance the instructional techniques, learning strategies and classroom activities you use in your literacy program to support students who have or may have dyslexia. All the strategies I will share not only help these students to build better functioning neural pathways, but can help all of your readers to excel and achieve.

The knowledge, strategies, activities, and assessments you gather in this seminar will help you teach and empower students with dyslexia to be more successful readers, writers and spellers. And because I know firsthand that teachers are some of the busiest people in the world, everything I present is practical and time efficient.

I look forward to spending the day with you, exploring how to maximize your instruction so it supports children with dyslexia, while strengthening the learning of your typically developing students. Now, more than ever, science has shown us how to help children with reading impairments. New understandings about how the brain works have given us an opportunity to reexamine literacy and its component parts. How fortunate we are to have this opportunity. I look forward to meeting you at my seminar!

Sincerely,

Mark Weakland

P.S. The job you do is so very important. Investing a day with me will give you knowledge, strategies and activities that can make a real difference in the reading, writing and spelling lives of your students with dyslexia.

"I have designed this dynamic day to equip you with practical tips and ideas that focus and enhance the instructional techniques, learning strategies and classroom activities you use in your literacy program to support students who have or may have dyslexia."
