'Many practical ideas to use immediately.'

— LINDA MERGLE, TEACHER

Practical Ideas and Strategies

This practical seminar is designed to help you significantly increase student motivation, grit, determination, and perseverance. You will learn powerful ways to help students develop a positive growth mindset and develop a stronger capacity to actively engage in the learning process, give their best efforts in school, and to persevere when they meet obstacles in their achievement. Outstanding teacher and presenter, Sandy Stewart will provide a compelling research-based rationale and dozens of specific, practical structures and strategies that have the power to help all students become successful in face-to-face instruction and online.

By applying these strategies you can improve students' attitudes toward themselves as learners, decrease off-task or disruptive behavior, increase your time to teach, strengthen student engagement, increase learning, and produce higher student achievement.

The focus of the day will be on specific classroom practices that boost motivation and increase students' ability to persevere, including the seemingly "unmotivated" or oppositional students. The goal is to increase responsible behavior, motivate greater student effort and produce higher student achievement.

A Message From Your Seminar Leader, Sandy Stewart

Uniquely Qualified Instructor

SANDY STEWART is an experienced classroom teacher and an outstanding trainer. As a current, full-time classroom teacher with diverse teaching experiences in both urban and suburban settings at a wide range of grade levels, Sandy knows what works and doesn't. Throughout Sandy's career, she has been passionate about researching and incorporating the best strategies for helping each student reach his/her full potential, academically and socially.

Sandy is the author of MOTIVATION, MINDSET and GRIT: Proven Strategies to Accelerate Learning and Improve Behavior, the extensive digital resource handbook each participant will receive at the seminar.

Participants leave Sandy's seminar inspired, enthused and equipped with a wealth of strategies they'll be able to use immediately upon returning to their classrooms.

Dear Colleague:

My first 15 years of teaching were in an inner city setting where I realized very quickly that motivating students was going to be one of the greatest challenges that I was going to face. That was true then and it still rings true as I enter my 32nd year in education. Very early on I began my own journey in not only understanding the complex theories and research behind motivation, mindset and grit but my passion became how to translate these big ideas into everyday classroom teaching. Over time I also began to understand how these concepts were so closely intertwined with sincere, genuine relationship teaching, engaging academic approaches and setting up our classrooms with the "non-cognitive" social and emotional life skills as well.

Drawing on my many years of classroom teaching experience, the latest research and insights from extensive additional training, I have designed this seminar to provide you with specific ways to motivate students to improve their attitude toward learning and school, increase their daily engagement, improve their ability to persevere and to understand how to change mindsets in a classroom. I encourage you to join me in this highly interactive one-day seminar. The day is packed with realistic ideas and strategies that can be easily implemented into the fast and furious teaching day. I look forward to sharing my enthusiasm, experience and ideas with you so that you, in turn, can create the conditions for all students to succeed. Whether your instruction is in-person, online or in a hybrid learning environment, you'll leave with numerous ideas you can use right away.

Sincerely,

Sandy Stewart

P.S. Although the ideas I present are research-based, my goal will be on sharing the practical ways any classroom teacher can increase students' motivation and willingness to give their best efforts both in and out of the classroom.

"I have designed this seminar to provide you with specific ways to motivate students to improve their attitude toward learning and school, increase their daily engagement, improve their ability to persevere and to understand how to change mindsets in a classroom."

What Your Colleagues Say About Sandy Stewart

"One of the most useful seminars I've attended in years! Many useful take-aways to share with my teachers. I'm looking forward to getting back into my classroom and reevaluating my relationships with my students."

Rachel Stevens, English Teacher

"Very enjoyable with tons of new materials and activities I can take back to my school. I also appreciated that this applied to not only teachers, but any staff member that connects with students."

Sarah Leclercq, School Counselor

"I appreciate all of the take-away materials that can immediately be used in my classroom. Having the book and website lists will be so helpful."

Carinne Mills, 5th Grade Teacher

"Excellent day. I am uplifted, inspired and encouraged!"
