Featuring Two of the Nation's Top Experts on Executive Function

KATHRYN PHILLIPS is an outstanding, dynamic presenter and pioneer in the area of Executive Function. With over 30 years of experience in schools, she has worked with thousands of educators in all areas of helping students with specific behavior and learning needs related to Executive Function. She is an author on the topic and is featured in the video streaming training package you will receive access to at this extensive institute. Kathryn's training and teaching experience provides a practical approach and perspective for working successfully with students with Executive Function deficits. You will leave feeling re-energized and better equipped to work with students who exhibit behavior problems, inattentiveness and learning difficulties due to a lack of Executive Function skills, and you will be prepared to provide training to your staff.

LISA ROGERS is an acclaimed presenter and veteran educator who specializes in teaching students with special needs and who lack Executive Function skills. She has over 20 years of experience both training teachers and working directly with children who exhibit difficult behaviors that prevent them from learning and socializing appropriately with others. Lisa's extensive experience provides a practical perspective for teaching students who have self-regulation deficits including impulsivity, lack of focus and an inability to think and plan actions due to a lack of Executive Function skills. Lisa is known for her research-based ideas and practical strategies that you will be able to immediately apply and use when you train others in the key areas of Executive Function.
